This data shows the number and percentage of domestic properties per constituency who switched their electricity supplier between September 2016 and August 2017 in Great Britain. A switch is an event in which a customer intends to switch electricity supply from their current supplier to a new supplier. When there is no objection from the old supplier and all the requisite intermediate processes are completed, the new supplier starts supplying the customer's premises. These figures are the total numbers of changes from one supplier to another which have completed in the month and where the new supplier has started supplying the electricity.
